Dear Quinn:

False Identity Program

Investigations conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) during the past several years have developed positive information that subversive and criminal elements are making widespread use of false identification documents. These investigations also reveal that the false identification problem is an ever-increasing one, directly affecting all areas of law enforcement.

In view of the complexity of this problem and its threat to effective law enforcement, it is believed a conference of interested agencies should be held in order to discuss mutual problems as they relate to the use of false identification. It is recognized the conference in itself will not solve this serious investigative problem facing law enforcement today, but it will afford the various agencies excellent opportunities to explore avenues in which to effectively combat this problem.
